The parts association is forbidden to carry out any "planned common course of action" with the jobbers organization. Neither group, however, is prohibited from "independently negotiating or entering into any legal exclusive or other sales agreement" where this does not lessen competition. The unanimous decision was based on answers, filed last March, in which both associations admitted certain of the commission's allegations. Subsequently the complaint was dismissed as to the jobbers and manufacturers who became members of the association after Jan. 1, 1947.
